

Garthwaite must go

Re King/Drew evidence points to malfeasance:

Now there are allegations of time card fraud and county supervisors (with the exception of Michael Antonovich) do little more than wring their hands as usual. As your editorial points out, if the allegations are true, then this would also incriminate the King Drew administration.

I believe that it also incriminates Dr. Thomas Garthwaite and Navigant Consultants because each have been responsible for the day-to-day management of King/Drew at some point during this period of alleged timecard fraud.

What I find even more disturbing is that neither Navigant Consulting, who the Los Angeles County taxpayers are paying $13.2 million and climbing, nor Dr. Garthwaite seemed to think it was important to inform the board, let alone put a stop to it before the allegations were revealed in the Los Angeles Times.

This recent failure in a growing list of failures is yet another reason for the board to dismiss Dr. Garthwaite. The only question that remains is "when?"
